Master in IDET

Observation. Inspiration. Determination. The three keys for success from my own background. The active acquisition of information from any sources or from other people helped me find my own path in life. The power of inspiration that made me see new possibilities, believe in myself by destroying all the limitations in my mind kept me on that path, and the determination, the strong feeling of certainty that no one can be an obstacle in my way, helped me walk confidently step by step to my goals. Thereby, I will highlight the major events in this path of life that helped me become who I am right at the moment.

After becoming a student of one of the most outstanding universities in Kazakhstan located in Almaty, “Kazakh University of International Relations and World Languages after Abylai Khan”, I tried to spend my university years as convenient as possible. A degree in pedagogy helped me to understand the importance of education in any sphere of life, and that it is more about how knowledge and values are transmitted to the younger generation and society as a whole, especially with the help of modern teaching methods. However, to be completely honest, this profession is still developing in my country. In more economically developed countries, such as the United States of America, there are thousands of books and research papers about pedagogy that are being published each year. Yet, only 15-20 of these books are translated into Kazakh, my native language. Despite this fact, I challenged myself in university years and searched for new interesting information in this sphere from different private resources to develop my skills and strengths as a future teacher.

During my university years, I also completed pedagogical practice in a secondary school, where I had the opportunity to apply the theoretical knowledge I gained in real classroom settings. I prepared lesson plans, conducted classes, and learned how to communicate effectively with students of different ages and levels. This experience taught me the importance of patience, responsibility, and creativity in the teaching profession.

In addition, I took part in volunteer activities, where I helped organize educational and cultural events for children and young people. Volunteering allowed me to develop leadership, teamwork, and communication skills, as well as to understand how important it is to support and inspire others. These experiences strengthened my motivation to work in education and to continue improving myself as a teacher.

Pedagogy is a great opportunity to shape the future of a country through education. For instance, Finland is famous for its progressive school system, Japan is admired for its discipline and respect in the classroom, and South Korea is well-known for its high academic achievements. With the help of pedagogy, I would like to contribute to the development of my country by sharing knowledge, inspiring students, and showing the best side of education in Kazakhstan.

I am confident that my academic background, teaching practice, and volunteer experience have prepared me to contribute effectively to your team. I am highly motivated to continue developing my professional skills and to bring enthusiasm, responsibility, and dedication to the role. I would be grateful for the opportunity to discuss how my qualifications align with your expectations in more detail during an interview.

Thank you for considering my application. I look forward to the possibility of contributing to your organization.
